

RES 802 - Research Design II

6 Credit Hours

This course is an intensive course focused on quantitative and mixed methods in research. Students will gain expertise in statistical data analysis to make comparisons between data sets and to draw results from samples. They will learn concepts such as sampling, probability, correlation and causation, and significance. Students will also gain the skills to assess the credibility and veracity of results asserted in other research.

Prerequisites

RES 801