IS 325 - Business Systems

3 Credit Hours

This course examines how information systems can be used to manage business processes and organization. Topics include factors that can influence information system selection, database usage, methodologies used to develop information system plan, functional systems, fundamentals of communication and networking within a system. Study includes the various roles and responsibilities within the information systems department, the role of management, and ethical considerations regarding information use within an organization.