

PS 480 - Theories of Personality

3 Credit Hours

The course in personality psychology is an overview of the major theoretical perspectives determining what factors contribute to personality. The perspectives include biological, environmental, and cultural influences on traits and expressions of human personality. Historical perspectives are presented, but research in more scientific perspectives are emphasized.

Prerequisites

PS 101