

PS 495 - Capstone Seminar in Psychology

3 Credit Hours

The Capstone seminar in psychology is designed for senior majors to review and integrate what they have learned in their psychology courses and to prepare for life after completion of their bachelor's degree. The emphasis is to integrate their knowledge into their plans for the future, whether the plans are for employment after graduation or graduate school. Additionally, this course presents lesser known sub-fields of psychology in which the students may be interested as careers or specialization in graduate school. Examples of the sub-fields include Human Factors Psychology, Comparative Psychology, and Personnel Psychology.
