

PS 103 - Behavior Modification

3 Credit Hours

Behavior modification applies psychological learning principles to solve practical problems of behavior. Students complete a self-modification project of their choosing. The project includes planning, measurement, record keeping, change implementation, and a final report describing how the students used behavior principles to attempt to modify the behavior they chose to change.