CS 220 - Object Oriented Programming

3 Credit Hours

This course features Java, which has become the language of choice for Internet-based and network-based applications, as well as many stand-alone applications. Topics include creating a fully functioning Java program using IDE, primitive types and reference types, instance and local variables, multiple classes and constructors, data types, loops, conditional statements, functions, arrays.

Prerequisites

CS 111