

ELE 620 - Telecommunications Security

3 Credit Hours

This course studies the critical importance of securing telecommunication networks, protocols, and data transmissions against evolving cyber threats. From understanding encryption techniques to mastering network security architectures, students gain insights into how telecommunications security is the foundation of secure and reliable communication in the digital age.